Tonic of Good Cheer.

Under this heading is a splendid article in Success. If more people could and would take this tonic there would be far less use for the drug store tonics. A good, hearty laugh before or after each meal is better than a teaspoonful of the doctor's medicine and it is much easier to take; it is not so bitter and does not make you screw up your face so much. It has both a direct and a reflex power; that is, it helps others and helps you. There is, of course, such a thing as overdoing the matter, and laughing too loudly, if not too much. It is a question whether one naturally can laugh too much. Let the tone of the laughter be moderated, not too boisterous, so as to attract much attention and criticism. Learn how to laugh from the soul as an art. Let it come from a fountain of peace in the soul. Its dews will water your own soul and cause that of others, who come within the range of your influence, to be brighter and sweeter. If I drive along the street or walk by the way and meet a boy or girl, man or woman, with a bright cheerful countenance, I am made to feel better.

Some one has said: "Laugh and the world laughs with you, Weep and you weep alone."

With some people a happy, cheerful disposition is natural, but with others it must be cultivated.

But it can be cultivated. Try to have truth in the soul and a good conscience and the lesson is easy to learn.

Don't worry and fret and the task of cheerfulness is easy. We may be real benefactors by carrying, bright, sunny, cheerful faces about with us.

Following is the article taken from Success. Read it and make it yours: "Scatter your flowers as you go. For you will not pass this way again."

"It was N. P. Willis, I think, who added to the beatitudes—'Blessed are the joy-makers.' And this is why all the world likes little children, who are always ready to have a sunshine party,—little children bubbling over with fun, as a bobolink with song."

"How well we remember it all—the long gone years of our own childhood, and households of joyous children we have known of later years. Joy-makers are the children still,—some of them in unending scenes of light. I saw yesterday this epitaph at Mount Auburn,—

'She was pleasant, sunny-hearted in life, and now alive forevermore in light supernal.'

"How can we then but rejoice with joy unspeakable, as the children of immortality; living habitually above the gloom and damps of earth, and leading lives of ministrations; bestowing everywhere sweetness and light—radiating upon the earth something of the beauty of the unseen world."

"What is a sunny temper but a talisman more powerful than wealth, more precious than rubies? What is it but an aroma whose fragrance fills the air with the odors of Paradise?"

"I am so full of happiness," said a child, "that I could not be any happier unless I could grow." She bade "Good Morning" to the sweet singing bird, and "Good Morning," to the sun, then she asked her mother's permission, and softly, reverently bade "Good Morning to God"—and why should she not.

"Was it not Goethe who represented a journey following the sunshine around the world, forever bathed in light?"

"Nothing will supply the want of sunshine to peaches," said Emerson, "and to make knowledge valuable you must have the cheerfulness of wisdom."

"Wonderous is the strength of cheerfulness," said Carlyle, "altogether past calculation its powers of endurance. Efforts to be permanently useful must be uniformly joyous—a spirit all sunshine, graceful from very gladness, beautiful because bright."

"The cheerful man carries with him perpetually, in his presence and personality, an influence that acts upon others as summer warmth on the fields and forests. It wakes up and calls out the best that is in them. It makes them stronger, braver and happier. Such a man makes a little spot of this world a lighter, brighter, warmer place for other people to live in. To meet him in the morning is to get inspiration which makes all the day's tasks and struggles easier. His hearty handshake puts a thrill of new vigor into your veins. After talking with him for a few minutes, you feel an exhilaration of spirits, a quickening of energy, a renewal of zest and interest in living, and are ready for any duty or service."

"Great hearts there are among men," says Hillis, of Plymouth pulpit; "they carry a volume of manhood; their presence is sunshine; their coming changes our climate; they oil the bearings of life; their shadows always fall behind them; they make right living easy. Blessed are the happiness-makers; they represent the best forces in civilization!"

"If refined manners reprove us a little for ill-timed laughter, a smiling face, kindled by a smiling heart is always in order. Who can ever forget Emerson's smile? It was a perpetual benediction upon all who knew him. A smile is said to be to the human countenance what sunshine is to the landscape. It is sometimes called the rainbow to the face."

"The first prize at a flower show was taken by a pale, sickly little girl who lived in a close dark court in the east of London. The judges asked how she could grow in such a dingy and sunless place. She replied that a little ray of sunlight came into the court; as soon as it appeared in the morning, she put the flower beneath it, and, as it moved, moved the flower, so that she kept it in the sunlight all day."—Young People's World.

Quality vs. Quantity.

Hard muscles and strong body do not depend on the quantity of food you eat, but on its perfect digestion and proper assimilation. When you take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure your system gets all the nourishment out of all the food you eat. It digests what you eat regardless of the condition of the stomach and conveys the nutrient properties to the blood and tissues. This builds up and strengthens the entire system, overcomes and cures indigestion, Dyspepsia, Belching, Sour Stomach, etc. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for what is sometimes called America's national disease—Dyspepsia—is destined to eventually work a wonderful and lasting benefit to sufferers from this distressing and mind harassing condition. Sold by G. R. Wiley.

The Practical View.

"The trees stand up so beautifully," exclaimed the young poet, just home from college.

"Yes," replied the old man, "that's some tall timber round here."

"They seem to laugh in the wind and bow 'good morning' to you," continued the poet.

"Look here, John," said the old man "fore you go plumb crazy, take this here ax an' chop me down a dozen trees and run 'em through the sawmill!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Smoke in Handling Bees.

In passing from apiary to apiary, looking for foul brood, I am surprised to see how differently men use, or misuse smoke, when handling bees. Some men even ask me if I ever "smoke in the entrances?" says a writer in Bee Keepers' Review. As a rule, such men will jar the hives in taking off the cover, then pry or pull off the super with a snap. About this time the bees, angry bees, begin pouring out at the entrance, and from the top of the hive, and then the beekeeper begins to use the smoker; but the bees are mad, now, and no amount of smoke will pacify them.

The most important place to use smoke, is at the entrance, and it should be used there as the first step in opening a hive. Subdue the bees first, then all of the fanning will only make their subjection the more complete. So many times has some man cautioned me about attempting to examine some colony, saying the bees were perfect tigers, and that I would be stung terribly. I always say: "Give me the smoker." I give them a good, thorough smoking before attempting to open the hive. I then open the hive carefully, using a little smoke if there is any sign of obstreperousness.

As a rule I pass the ordeal without a sting, while the owner looks on with amazement.

BEES AND BEE KEEPING.

A LESSON IN BEE ECONOMY.

Marvelous Family Ties Exist Among the Little Honey Makers.

"It is as certain as anything can be that at one time the bee was simply male and female. The irresponsible male buzzed about getting his own living, marrying and dying. The responsible female not only got her own living, but that of her children. Somehow, they came to see the advantage of communal effort, and, just as women say now: 'If you'll wash the dishes; I'll wipe 'em,' one female bee said to the others: 'I'll be the mother if you'll get the living.' It was a bargain, and they took the drones to board. Somebody had to look out for them. The queen of a bee hive does not rule; she lays eggs. She does not mind the babies. She does not even do her own digesting, letting alone getting the food. The attendants that surround her are not continually bowing and scraping and saying: 'Your Majesty,' they are feeding her with bee-milk, secreted by glands in their heads. It is like the chyle poured into our blood, food so perfect that the queen does not need to leave the hive from time to time to keep it clean and sweet. She has to be fed continually, for at certain periods she has the power of producing from 2,000 to 3,000 eggs a day, twice her own weight—four times, indeed, for more than half her weight is eggs. In her lifetime a very prolific queen will lay 1,500,000 eggs. Put each of these little grains, one-fourteenth of an inch long, end to end, and they will make a line of a mile and three-quarters.

"She possesses the power of choosing which of her offspring shall be drones and which workers. Some have thought that this was automatic, and that the narrower worker cell touched the button, so to speak, that brought forth a fertilized egg. But the queen will lay worker eggs in drone cells if she thinks fit, so that settles that.

"If the drone is male and the queen female what is the worker? The New Woman of Bee-dom. She has given up her motherhood for a business career. Sometimes, though, she lays eggs, but they always hatch out drones, of which it is strictly true to say: They have a mother, but no father. If the queen's wings are crippled so that she cannot make her marriage flight, her children are a hive of black bees—will beget workers of mixed blood, but her sons are pure Italians. Drones are useful as fathers of workers, but they cannot collect the honey they eat. Their tongues are too short.

"The worm when it hatches out of the egg lies in its cell surrounded by bee-milk or 'royal jelly,' as it is called. As it grows in size and strength it is weaned, so to speak, by having the milk diluted more and more with pap made of pollen, honey and water, till it finally lives on grown-bee diet. If the worker is not weaned, if it lives on the fat of the land till it spins its cocoon, it will be a queen. I don't know how it would do to put little girls on a low diet to make New Women out of them. It is an experiment worth trying—on somebody else's little girl. Not mine. Not mine.

"What marvelous, what miraculous transformations occur in the progress from that like the stuff the women folks call tiny pearly egg, covered with a fine net 'blonde,' through the blind and legless grub that soaks its food in as well as eats it; through the chrysalis that lies tranced while the swellings on its shoulders change into a double pair of gauzy wings and that ridge upon its breast is metamorphosed into an ingenious tongue, while the interior organs undergo profound mutations, each step of which traces back through millions upon millions of contributing ancestors—

"Ah! we are too ignorant, too dull and stupid to understand!"—Harry Sutherland in Ainslie's.

The Judge's Course.

The man up for larceny had admitted his guilt when apprehended, but at the trial his youthful counsel defended him with great obstinacy and unnecessary brilliancy.

"Gentlemen," said the judge, regarding the jury with a benevolent smile, "the prisoner says he is guilty. His counsel says he is not. You must decide between them."

Then, after an effective pause, the judge added: "There is one thing to remember, gentlemen. The prisoner was there and his counsel wasn't."—Green Bag.

BEES AND BEE KEEPING

A LESSON IN BEE ECONOMY.

Marvelous Family Ties Exist Among the Little Honey Makers.

"It is as certain as anything can be that at one time the bee was simply male and female. The irresponsible male buzzed about getting his own living, marrying and dying. The responsible female not only got her own living, but that of her children. Somehow, they came to see the advantage of communal effort, and, just as women say now: 'If you'll wash the dishes; I'll wipe 'em,' one female bee said to the others: 'I'll be the mother if you'll get the living.' It was a bargain, and they took the drones to board. Somebody had to look out for them. The queen of a bee hive does not rule; she lays eggs. She does not mind the babies. She does not even do her own digesting, letting alone getting the food. The attendants that surround her are not continually bowing and scraping and saying: 'Your Majesty,' they are feeding her with bee-milk, secreted by glands in their heads. It is like the chyle poured into our blood, food so perfect that the queen does not need to leave the hive from time to time to keep it clean and sweet. She has to be fed continually, for at certain periods she has the power of producing from 2,000 to 3,000 eggs a day, twice her own weight—four times, indeed, for more than half her weight is eggs. In her lifetime a very prolific queen will lay 1,500,000 eggs. Put each of these little grains, one-fourteenth of an inch long, end to end, and they will make a line of a mile and three-quarters.

"She possesses the power of choosing which of her offspring shall be drones and which workers. Some have thought that this was automatic, and that the narrower worker cell touched the button, so to speak, that brought forth a fertilized egg. But the queen will lay worker eggs in drone cells if she thinks fit, so that settles that.

"If the drone is male and the queen female what is the worker? The New Woman of Bee-dom. She has given up her motherhood for a business career. Sometimes, though, she lays eggs, but they always hatch out drones, of which it is strictly true to say: They have a mother, but no father. If the queen's wings are crippled so that she cannot make her marriage flight, her children are a hive of black bees—will beget workers of mixed blood, but her sons are pure Italians. Drones are useful as fathers of workers, but they cannot collect the honey they eat. Their tongues are too short.

"The worm when it hatches out of the egg lies in its cell surrounded by bee-milk or 'royal jelly,' as it is called. As it grows in size and strength it is weaned, so to speak, by having the milk diluted more and more with pap made of pollen, honey and water, till it finally lives on grown-bee diet. If the worker is not weaned, if it lives on the fat of the land till it spins its cocoon, it will be a queen. I don't know how it would do to put little girls on a low diet to make New Women out of them. It is an experiment worth trying—on somebody else's little girl. Not mine. Not mine.

"What marvelous, what miraculous transformations occur in the progress from that like the stuff the women folks call tiny pearly egg, covered with a fine net 'blonde,' through the blind and legless grub that soaks its food in as well as eats it; through the chrysalis that lies tranced while the swellings on its shoulders change into a double pair of gauzy wings and that ridge upon its breast is metamorphosed into an ingenious tongue, while the interior organs undergo profound mutations, each step of which traces back through millions upon millions of contributing ancestors—

"Ah! we are too ignorant, too dull and stupid to understand!"—Harry Sutherland in Ainslie's.

The Judge's Course.

The man up for larceny had admitted his guilt when apprehended, but at the trial his youthful counsel defended him with great obstinacy and unnecessary brilliancy.

"Gentlemen," said the judge, regarding the jury with a benevolent smile, "the prisoner says he is guilty. His counsel says he is not. You must decide between them."

Then, after an effective pause, the judge added: "There is one thing to remember, gentlemen. The prisoner was there and his counsel wasn't."—Green Bag.

Staking Tomatoes.

Relative to the advantages of staking tomatoes the authors state that tomatoes thus trained can be planted much closer, the fruit is of better quality, and in excessively wet years is possible to ripen a good crop of fruit, when if planted in the ordinary manner it might not mature at all. Little difference was noticed in the time of maturing of tomatoes whether from field-grown seed or from seed started in the greenhouse and the seedlings transplanted to the field.

A Lady's Singular Difficulty.

Among the applicants at the Highgate police court was a lady who desired to swear to an affidavit as to her age. She said she believed she was about 40 years of age. She was born on board a ship on the way to Venice.

Sir Francis Cory-Wright—Have you been to Somerset House? If it was an English ship your birth would be registered there.

Applicant—I think it was a foreign ship.

Mr. Frank Beal (the clerk)—Why do you want to do this?

Applicant—A friend of mine died a short time ago, leaving a sum of money to be invested in an annuity for me. The solicitors say that they cannot buy the annuity because I cannot produce my birth certificate.

Sir Francis told the applicant to put her statement in writing and then attend the court again and swear to its accuracy before the bench.—London Pall Mall Gazette.

A Family Friend for Thirty Years

Dear Sirs:—

We have used "L. F." Medicine for the last thirty years and always keep it in the house. Could not do without it. It's the best spring medicine I can find.

H. H. FARNHAM,
812 Water St., Gardiner, Me.
Feb. 23, 1904.

The True "L. F." Atwood's Bitters cure dyspepsia and headaches; prevent colds. A family friend you can depend upon.

FOR SALE.

Shelburne Spring House, Shelburne, N. H.

The house is near Depot, Post Office and Telegraph Office. In good situation to accommodate White Mountain Tourists. Families and Parties wishing a quiet, pleasant place to spend their vacation will find this all they desire. It is surrounded with beautiful mountain scenery at the base of Mount Winthrop within easy access of Mount Washington and the Presidential groups of the White Mountains.

From Mount Winthrop you get a beautiful view of the valley of the big Androscoggin River shedding its silver light far into the Wilds of Maine. Then, turning your eye, you look upon Mount Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison, and many smaller mountains which skirt the valley below. There are hundreds of views which attract and charm the eye of the Tourist. The streams abound with fish and the forest with game.

A good livery connected with the house. The ride from Boston to Shelburne is delightful, passing through one of the most beautiful and charming sections in New England.

House newly furnished, rooms large and airy. Connecting rooms if wanted. Large farm in connection with house from which tables are supplied; also fruit and berries of all kinds.

SHELBURNE SPRING.

From which the house takes its name, comes out of mountain about one thousand feet above the house. The water was analyzed the past year by Prof. Frank L. Bartlett, State Assayer of Maine, who pronounced it a wonderful spring of water; he says in conclusion, in his analysis, "The value of this water consists in its most remarkable purity, being almost as pure as distilled water."

This is one of the most desirable pieces of hotel property in New England, and can be had at a reasonable price, and on easy terms.

FEED FOR WORKING HORSES.

Oats the Ideal Grain Food With Corn in Moderation.

We should always remember that oats form the ideal grain food for the horse, writes Prof. W. A. Henry of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. The kernel proper contains a large amount of nutriment. The hulls surrounding the grain give the material bulk, tending thereby to prevent overfeeding, and at the same time rendering the food light and easy of digestion by the fluids of the stomach. Where horses are hard worked one should depart from the oat ration with caution, and learn by experience what can be accomplished. The farmer might well try bran and gluten feed as partial substitutes for oats. Remember that bran is light and partially inert, so that it may take the place of a small portion of the hay formerly consumed. On the other hand, it furnishes to the horse probably three-fifths or three-fourths as much nutriment as the same weight of oats. In using gluten feed remember that it is considerably higher in protein than oats and almost or quite as rich as the carbohydrates. In the trial reduce the oat allowance one-third and substitute a mixture of bran and gluten feed equal parts by weight.

Remember, too, that corn can always be fed to horses with satisfaction. There is a limit, however, to its use, and in such cases as these the supply should not be large. For one feed each day allow a couple of pounds of corn is substituted for the same of oats. Remember that corn causes horses to sweat if fed in large quantities. It is a better winter than summer food. Corn is a strong, hearty food and is much appreciated by hard worked horses, because it does furnish so much energy. In the southern part of the corn belt horses live almost wholly upon corn. Farther north where oats are the main crop they subsist almost entirely on the latter grain. A combination of the two usually will prove more economical and better than to feed either so exclusively as is customary.—Farmers Voice.

How to Tell the Horse's Age.

A horse's age is judged principally by the incisive teeth or "nippers," of which there are six in each jaw, broad, thin and sharp in the colt, but with flat crowns marked in the center by a hollow disk, in the horse. Figure 1 in the colt represents the milk set at the age of six months. These milk teeth have grooves or furrows on their front surface, which disappear from the middle pair at the end of one year, from the next pair in two years, and from the outside pair in three years.

Agers of Horses by Their Teeth.

At two and a half years the middle pair of the milk set is replaced by a permanent pair with deep black cavities, and full sharp edge. At three, to three and one-half years, the next pair drop, and at four, to four and a half years, the two external incisors are lost. At five years the horse has his permanent set of teeth figure 2.

The teeth grow in length as the horse becomes older, and are also worn away about one-twelfth of an inch every year, gradually defacing the pits as the teeth wear down to a level with their bottom.

At six years old the black cavities disappear from the center pair of nippers, as is shown by figure 3. At seven years the cavities of the next pair disappear, and at the age of eight years the corner teeth lose their cavities and the teeth then appear as shown by figure 4.

Wire Fencing for Hogs.

About the best thing that has struck the hog raiser in the past ten years is woven wire fencing. When barb wire and boards were depended upon for fencing the hogs were forever and eternally getting out just when it was most inconvenient. Now when pigs are shut up they stay. For the same money, too, much more ground can be fenced in than when wire and lumber were the cheapest and besides much less time is required to put up the strands.

In Condition.

To keep a horse in the best condition constant care needs to be exercised in keeping the skin clean and free from scurf and dust. If the pores of the skin are closed, a large quantity of waste matter is retained which in effect is as unhealthful as if the bowels were closed, and the wastes of the system in this way were retained and absorbed.

A statistician says that France has about 4,000 duels a year and Italy 2,800.

Mark Twain in his lecture days reached a small eastern town one afternoon and went before dinner to a barber's to be shaved.

"You are a stranger in town, sir?" the barber asked.

"Yes, I'm a stranger here," was the reply.

"We're having a good lecture here to night, sir," said the barber. "A Mark Twain lecture. Are you going to it?"

"Yes, I think I will," said Mr. Clemens.

"Have you got your ticket yet?" the barber asked.

"No, not yet," said the other.

"Then, sir, you'll have to stand."

"Dear me!" exclaimed Mr. Clemens. "It seems as if I always do have to stand when I hear that man Twain lecture."—New York Tribune.

Feared the Worst. Friday Vizer, a familiar negro about town in a certain part of Mississippi, had been found dead, and he being a member of no church or lodge—very unusual for a negro—there was no one to pray for his soul in the great beyond. A few old intimates, however, carried the body to the cemetery in a rude pine coffin, and Bob McRaven, one of the number, an old "befo-de-wah darky," was called upon for a few remarks. Bob removed his hat and stepped reverently and sadly toward the open grave, and in solemn funeral tones said: "Friday Vizer, you is gone. We hopes you is gone whar we 'speets you ain't!"—February Lippincott's.

What He Thought Of.

"You remember the Ashtabula disaster, of course?" said the man with the double chin. "Well, I was one of the passengers on the ill-fated train that plunged through the bridge. For the hour preceding the accident I had been arguing religion with a fellow passenger and we had some very hot words. When I felt the bridge going I had only one thought that I afterward remembered."

"And that was whether you would escape death, of course?" was queried.

"No, sir. I wondered if it were possible that I, a consistent and leading member of the Methodist church, would be taken while that dunder-head of a Baptist with whom I had been arguing would be saved to brag over me!"

Feel Impending Doom.

The feeling of impending doom in the minds of many victims of Bright's disease and diabetes has been changed to thankfulness by the benefit derived from taking Foley's Kidney Cure. It will cure incipient Bright's disease and diabetes and even in the worst cases gives comfort and relief. Slight disorders are cured in a few days. "I had diabetes in its worst form," writes Marion Lee of Dunreath, Ind. "I tried eight physicians without relief. Only three bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure made me a well man." Sold by G. R. Wiley.

How to Grow Mushrooms.

Mix thoroughly three parts of horse manure, free from straw with one part of old pasture soil. Make a bed in the cellar or anywhere that a temperature of 60 or 70 degrees can be maintained; make the bed of any shape or size desired. Have the compost from eight to ten inches deep. When the heat has subsided to about 90 degrees plant pieces the size of hickory-nut, three inches deep and six to eight inches apart of the spawn, and press the compost compactly. After eight or ten days, cover the bed with two inches of loam and top of this with three or four inches of straw or hay, and smooth it down evenly.

The mushrooms will appear in six or eight weeks if the temperature is right.

STATE NEWS.

Ten thousand silver salmon have been distributed in the waters of Seven Tree Pond at Union, the first of this kind to be put in Maine waters by the U. S. bureau of fisheries.

Remembering the trouble and damage that followed the attempt to prevent the ringing of the bells, the night before the Fourth, last year, Bath feels inclined to let them ring all night, this year.

Eastport is feeling elated over the fact that the Secretary of the Navy has ordered to that port for July 4 the big monitor Puitan. Another interesting feature of Eastport's observance of the Fourth will be the oration by Congressman Powers.

The University of Maine Commencement week conferred 115 degrees, the largest number, it is believed, ever given a graduating class from any Maine college. Of this number 11 were advanced degrees. In addition, certificates were awarded to three graduates from the School of Agriculture, the first class to be graduated from this new course of elementary and technical character.

The Grand Trunk railway has agreed to handle at Portland all apples along its line in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. This means a great deal to Portland and will doubtless result in thousands of barrels of apples more being sent out from that port, the coming winter, then during the season just ended and probably more than ever before.

It has been decided to change the name of the training ship Chesapeake, which was built at the Bath Iron Works, and it will be re-christened the Severn. In the early history of the navy there was a Chesapeake which furnished the unique instance of a United States ship lowering her flag to an enemy of equal strength, and it has been decided not to perpetuate a name thus dishonored, hence the re-christening of the school-ship.

Extensive preparations are being made to lay the corner stone of the Littlefield Memorial church in Rockland on July 4 with a religious and patriotic celebration. The secretary of the Maine Free Baptist association who is also superintendent of the Ocean Park association and a student of the Charles Spurgeon school, England, is expected to be one of the speakers of the day. There will be a memorial to the late Rev. W. H. Littlefield, a prominent Free Baptist clergyman. Congressman Littlefield is his son.

Five thousand copies of Congressman Littlefield's famous eulogy delivered in Congress last February on the occasion of the acceptance of the statue of Frances Willard, have been printed by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. It is noteworthy that while a number of distinguished men made speeches at that time, that our Maine Congressman is the only one to be given this mark of distinction.

Augusta is the first city in the State to engage its Memorial Day orator for 1906, having secured C. C. H. French of Welchville.

Wednesday evening of last week at his summer cottage at Cushing's Island, Judge Hale of the United States District court entertained his fellow members of the Bowdoin college class of 1869. Several of the members were in attendance and a very pleasant time was enjoyed. For a number of years it has been the custom of this class to have a reunion dinner in Brunswick at commencement, but this year by invitation of Judge Hale it was decided to take a new departure and to be his personal guests at his beautiful summer home.

M. E. Church Notes.

Last Wednesday evening the friends of Rev. F. C. Potter, the retiring pastor of the M. E. church, and his estimable wife gathered at the vestry for a genuine old-fashioned pound party. There were numerous pounds and £'s, quite a large sum of money being added to the many tokens of esteem and regret, given by his late parishioners. There was also given, as a reminder of Bethel, its industry, those engaged in it, and as an expression of the desire for the rest and comfort which it is hoped may come to this tired preacher, a beautiful rocker, one of Bethel's own. Solos were rendered by Mrs. E. L. Arno, Mrs. C. O. Foster, and Miss Jane Gibson, and the remainder of the evening spent in conversation and sociability.

The Children's Day exercises were held Sunday morning at the hour of the regular preaching service, owing to the absence of a pastor. The church was very prettily decorated. In the center of the platform was a large cross of daisies on which were the letters I. H. S. in crimson flowers; at the right of the cross was a standard bearing a crescent and star of evergreen and wild flowers. The altar was decorated with syringas and ferns, also wild flowers and potted plants. Much credit is due Miss Elsie Davis who had charge of the decorations and her assistants, for the pleasing appearance of the church. The program consisted of recitations and songs by the children and the choir. The motion song by the primary grade was very pretty and showed what faithful training can do. Little Miss Blanche Herrick sang a very pretty solo. The recitations by the little ones were all nicely given and much appreciated. A chorus of boys and girls from the intermediate classes offered several selections, especially nice being the song in which Miss Susie Tyler sang the solo very sweetly and the chorus sang the refrain. Mrs. C. O. Foster and Miss Bessie Andrews rendered the sacred duet, "The Lord is My Shepherd," in a most effective manner and Miss Lula Arno gave a solo. The services closed with a few remarks by the Sunday school superintendent, Mr. H. H. Annis, and a hymn by the choir and congregation, after which Mr. N. L. Springer of West Bethel, pronounced the benediction.

The Ladies' Aid sold ice cream on the church lawn Saturday evening. The sale was well patronized and a large sum realized.

Health!

Do you want it? health! which brings the even pulse, the clear brain, the hospitable heart, the cheerful manner, and the bigger bank balance. Do you want it? Then get the Muskoka appetite, the Muskoka muscle, and the Muskoka color. In the "Muskoka" region health is given away, but you must apply for it in person. Uncle Sam's people pay no duty on health. When to go, how to go, the best hotel, short talks on fishing, canoeing, camping, bathing and a word about expenses—all in a little book with a map and nineteen views issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System. Sent on application to J. Quinlan, D. P. A., G. T. Ry., Montreal.

Asthma Sufferers Should Know This.

Foley's Honey and Tar has cured many cases of asthma that were considered hopeless. Mrs. Adolph Buesing, 701 West Third St., Davenport, Iowa, writes: "A severe cold contracted twelve years ago was neglected until it finally grew into asthma. The best medical skill available could not give me more than temporary relief. Foley's Honey and Tar was recommended and one fifty-cent bottle entirely cured me of asthma which had been growing on me for twelve years, and if I had taken it at the start I would have been saved years of suffering." Sold by G. R. Wiley.

Ice Cream and Strawberry Festival.

Nature always smiles on an under taking for the benefit of our Library, so the Association was prepared for the warm, clear evening of last Thursday, even if the preceding days had been rainy.

The richly colored peonies, dainty doilies, and suggestions of good things to come, made the library room look really festive. On the porch and lawn settees were arranged, and Japanese lanterns added much to the effect.

Best of all were the friends who came, anxious for ice cream and cake, strawberries and cream. They were gladly served and seemed to have a happy time.

Over seventeen dollars were received. The Library Association sincerely thanks all those who in any way helped to make this success possible.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also a convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail.

Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Home of Swamp-Root, Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Attempted Suicide at Mason.

Last Saturday afternoon Elbridge D. Merrill of Mason, while in a frenzy of rage attempted to kill his wife and younger children with a butcher knife. Mrs. Merrill and a son about twelve years old disarmed and overpowered him long enough to allow the little ones to escape to a neighbor's from whence assistance was summoned by telephone. In the meantime, Merrill had wrested from his captors and throwing his wife against a bookcase injured her so that she could no longer attempt to hold him. In this condition, he dragged her to the place where his loaded revolver was kept, but in getting possession of it he loosed his hold upon her and she ran from the house accompanied by the boy. They had gone but a short distance across the field when two shots were heard and a bullet passed near them. The other bullet entered Merrill's own head, inflicting a serious wound. He soon after appeared at a window and then came out of the house and went to a brook near by falling twice on the way.

A grown son and neighbors arriving, Merrill was forced into submission, and his wound dressed by Dr. Sturdivant. His injury was such that he was taken to the hospital in Lewiston, Sunday, where his recovery is considered doubtful. Merrill has a bad reputation, having repeatedly threatened to put his wife out of existence.

Pacific Coast Tour.

Chance of a Lifetime—Don't Miss It—Speak Quick.

The personally conducted excursion to the Pacific Coast to start July 5th bids fair to be an unqualified success. Bookings are nearly all in, and the details are being arranged for one of the finest personally conducted tours ever starting from the New England states. Every arrangement in connection with these tours has been to the end that the one hundred and twenty-five people who avail themselves of the opportunity of taking it may enjoy the pleasantest tour of their lives.

The route, which starts from Maine over the Maine Central through the White Mountains, is from start to finish one of the most attractive on the American continent; the rates are the lowest ever named from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and the details looking to the convenience and pleasure of the members of the party have had the most careful consideration. Any who anticipate joining the July 5th party, should make reservations at once, as the details must be closed within the next few days.

A second party will start on Aug. 23. Bookings for this one are coming in rapidly and any desiring to secure accommodations must apply soon.

Each party will be personally conducted by E. C. Bowler of Bethel, Me., from whom full information may be obtained.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR HYOMEI.

Far Easier to Cure Catarrh Now Than at Any Other Season.

Now is the time to use Hyomei, when the early summer days make it so easy to cure catarrhal troubles. The Hyomei treatment, breathed for a few minutes three or four times a day in May or June, will do good twice as quickly as it did in January, and nearly everyone knows that used faithfully then, it completely rids the system of catarrh.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs but one dollar, and consists of a neat inhaler that can be carried in the purse or vest pocket and will last a lifetime, a medicine dropper, and a bottle of Hyomei. Extra bottles of Hyomei can be procured, if desired for fifty cents.

G. R. Wiley gives his personal guarantee with every Hyomei outfit he sells to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction. There is no risk whatever to the purchaser of Hyomei.

POULTRY

KEEP POULTRY FOR PROFIT.

Money in Proper Care and Feeding for Farmers.

One of the main reasons that more money is not made out of poultry is the careless way in which the chickens are treated. They are looked upon as scavengers, and as a rule, they go hungry. When the young chicks are fed it is too often the case that instead of placing their feed on clean boards where the chicks can easily get at it, the feed is dumped down amid the dirt and refuse of the coop. This can easily be rectified by the use of old plates, pie dishes or other cooking utensils which are unfit for use in the kitchen. These should be thoroughly rinsed out before the feed is put in them, and it will be surprising at the rapid development the tiny little chicks make when thus treated.

The poultry should be treated as if it were profitable and not as a nuisance. Instead of giving the poultry any kind of an old house for shelter, care should be taken that the house is kept warm and has nearly a summer condition as is possible without using artificial heat.

The perches should be regularly and thoroughly cleaned and oiled, the nests renewed and the house whitewashed inside and out. Instead of a board floor on which trash is allowed to accumulate week after week, several inches of the earth should be removed and replaced with sand, topped with gravel. Plenty of cut green bone, charcoal or pounded glass or china dishes should be kept where it is accessible to the poultry at all times. The most successful poultrymen prefer to feed grain at intervals throughout the day. The grain is fed in a litter of straw in order that the chickens may get the needed exercise in scratching for the grain. Skim milk should be given in abundance, as it contains one of the best protein foods. Chickens should be fed as regularly as a work horse, the dog, or the ranchman himself. If the proper care is exercised with the poultry it will soon be found that in proportion to the cost of keeping, the poultry will yield as much or more revenue as is realized from any other industry on the ranch.

Good Housing Necessary. Good housing adds to the comfort and cheerfulness of the fowls; it conditions them bodily and subsequently stimulates the production of eggs at a time when eggs are in demand at a premium. Hot, highly seasoned, stimulating foods may contribute something toward the production of bodily heat, which, is, of course, essential to the growth and development of the egg; but the natural, steady, even bodily warmth is no longer present when the hot, stimulating mash is brought on. We must look to resources other than the pepper box if we would induce activity in the action of the egg functions; it is the healthy action induced by scratching and exercising that properly diffuses bodily heat and causes the egg organs to perform their natural work.

Don't Start Too Large. A great many failures result from starting on too large a scale; it is better to be sure you can make it profitable in a small way before you attempt large things. After you are sure that you understand the business in its details, you are ready to make a larger business profitable. There is much in every industry that can be learned only by experience, and this is especially true of poultry culture.

Scratching Shed. The scratching shed is not an absolute necessity in connection with the roosting room, provided the poultry keeper numbers his flock proportionately to the size or capacity of the roosting apartment. It is well to arrange curtains that can be dropped about the roost platform at night which protects the birds from draughts that are sure to exist at times. The poultry house need not be elaborate in design, nor expensive in construction; it should be built in a manner that will insure warmth without artificial heat.

Poultry Squibs. Make fowls work for feed by throwing grain in straw.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature."—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. "If the more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly. Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost. Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

TORTURING PAIN.

Half This Man's Sufferings Would Have Killed Many a Person, But Doan's Cured Him.

Thousands of grateful people are telling every day how Doan's Kidney Pills cured them of distressing and dangerous kidney and bladder troubles.

Yet other thousands are suffering every day from these same ills. Why? They are either very negligent or very skeptical. Neglect of kidney disorders leads to dropsy, diabetes, Bright's disease and other fatal diseases.

Sincere, honest testimony like the following should convince every skeptic.

A. C. Sprague, stock dealer, of Normal, Ill., writes: "For two whole years I was doing nothing but buying medicines to cure my kidneys. I do not think that any man ever suffered as I did and lived. The pain in my back was so bad that I could not sleep at night. I could not ride a horse and sometimes was unable even to ride in a car. My condition was critical when I sent for Doan's Kidney Pills. I used three boxes and they cured me. Now I can go anywhere and do as much as anybody. I sleep well and feel no discomfort at all."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Sprague will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.

A COMMON FAILING.

"If that were a child of mine, I guess."

Good Mrs. Smithers would say.

"I'd put the poor thing in a decent dress;

I'd teach it manners and usefulness;

I'd talk to it more and spank it less;

I'd raise it in a different way."

(She always adopts quite a critical tone,

But hasn't a chick or a child of her own.)

"If I was runnin' this government,"

Old Henry Williams would say,

"I'd show 'em 'at I was president;

I'd bust them trusts to a large extent;

I'd show some good of the money spent;

I'd run 'it in a different way."

(And Henry might spare the time, no doubt,

For lately the sheriff sold Henry out.)

If we were in some one else's place

(You know that is what we all say)

We'd do all their duties with ease and grace;

We'd set 'em an unexampled pace

(It's almost a pity it's not the case);

We'd fill it a different way.

(In spite of this fact, people o' en will tell

Us we don't run our own affairs any too well.)

Too Much.

"How did you rest last night?"

As she spoke the hostess glanced with a non-expectant look at her guest and a show of assumed interest.

The guest smiled grimly.

"I never slept worse in my life," he replied. "The bed was poor, the sheets were sticky, the room was poorly ventilated, and between the servants moving around overhead and the dog barking underneath my window, I scarcely closed my eyes."

The hostess in a rage left the room and presently returned with her husband.

"Put that man out of the house at once!" she gasped.

"What!" exclaimed her astonished husband. "Has he insulted you?"

"He has indeed," replied his indignant wife. "Here I have been keeping house for years and he is the only one who has dared to tell me the truth."—Colliers Weekly.

SOME THINGS I HAVE LEARNED.

Address Before Nebraska Dairymen's Association by J. A. Harris.

That the dairy business can not be learned in one day, one month, or one year, even if one does read all he can about the business. Reading about the dairy, and running the dairy are two different things. There are things we must practice, before we will learn them. Milking is one of the things; we become expert only by practice. One who can start and milk a steady gait, will have better results than the one that milks fast, then slow, then fast again. We must learn a steady gait and as fast as it is possible for us to keep it up, till the cow is milked dry. Feeding is another thing we must experience before we can feed successfully. What each cow wants and the quantity she wants, we must learn by actual practice.

It is almost impossible to buy a number one dairy cow; she is seldom, if ever, for sale, and if she is for sale, a friend or neighbor will get her. We can not tell the value of a dairy cow until we have milked her through one period of lactation and used the scales and tester in determining the quantity and quality of milk. She may have a perfect shaped body and udder, and yet be defective in some way. She may have the self-milking habit, a kicker, a breechy cow, or hold her milk and not let it come down as she should, or some other habit that would make her an unprofitable cow. The safest way is to raise the dairy herd by careful selection of dam and sire, and using only the very best milk strain to be had.

I have learned that a cow will fail to yield her owner a profit on an empty stomach and the shady side of a barb wire fence for shelter. She must be satisfied with both feed and shelter for twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week and fifty-two weeks in a year, in order to be profitable.

I have learned in the past season that my cows, running in the pasture, would fall off gradually for four or five weeks, then after a good shower they go back to their former yield per day. If I had supplied them with feed during that time, my profit would have been much greater.

That it pays to get a good milk breed. They are generally of a kinder disposition and when you feed a dairy cow, she will show it in the milk part and not in laying on of flesh; with the half bred it is just the reverse.

That it pays better to run a dairy without a dog. The cows are quieter. A dog, that will nip their heels, will cause kicky cows.

That it pays to keep the cows clean, and also the stable by having a floor of some kind and a gutter about six or eight inches deep and sixteen or eighteen inches wide behind the cows; it is an easy matter to keep the cow and stable clean. The barn should be cleaned both morning and night.—Ranch and Range.

French Milk Production.

From a description from a well known farm near Paris it is interesting to note the care employed in all the details of milk production. Rather high-priced cows are kept, costing sometimes $200 each. Every cow is groomed daily and the udder washed. The cows are subjected to the tuberculin test but the disease does not seem to be common in that region or in any part of the principal dairy sections of France. The milking cows receive daily from sixty-five to ninety pounds of mangels, or some green forage, with 4½ pounds of gluten meal and about two pounds each of bran and linseed oil cake. In winter the quantity of oil cake is doubled and clover hay is fed liberally. Besides this ration the cows are fed oat straw twice daily. Spring water, which is warmed in winter, is supplied twice a day.—Farm and Field.

Water Calves.

Calves can swill down a lot of water when a person has to carry it to them, as I have to do. Alfalfa hay seems to give them greater thirst than any other kind of feed. When feeding it altogether each calf gets away with about twenty-four quarts of water daily but we do not have to carry it over three rods. This is a new pen with a big barn intervening and thus it is not convenient to pipe the water.

New York Milk Market.

In order to secure certification of his milk by the milk commission of New York City the dairyman must have a clean cement floor stable, with whitewashed walls and abundant windows. Cows must be sponged and their tails scrubbed before each milking. White suits must be worn by attendants, bottles and utensils scalded and filled bottles kept on ice and shipped only in refrigerator cars.

SELECTING TURKEY STOCK.

Few Rules Observed to Advantage Will Insure Good Stock.

First.—Always use as breeders turkey hens over one year old. Be sure they are strong, healthy, and vigorous, and of good medium size. In no instance select the smaller ones. Do not strive to have them unnaturally large.

Second.—The male may be a yearling or older. Do not imagine that the large overgrown males are the best. Strength, health, and vigor, with well-proportioned medium size are the main points of excellence.

Third.—Avoid close breeding. New blood is of vital importance to turkeys. Better send a thousand miles for a new male than to risk the chances of inbreeding. Secure one in the fall so as to be assured of his health and vigor prior to the breeding season.

Feeding Small Chickens.

Chickens do not require food for the first twelve to thirty-six hours after hatching. One of the best foods that can be fed for the first few days is stale bread soaked in milk. This should be crumbled fine and placed where the chickens have free access to it, and where they can not step on it.

Granulated oats, (with the hulls removed) make an excellent food for young chickens. There is, perhaps, no better grain food for young chickens than oats prepared in this manner. It may be fed to good advantage after the second or third day in connection with the bread soaked in milk. A good practice is to keep it before them all the time.

A depressed mind makes the system more susceptible to disease; encourages its development because it kills the power of resistance. "Cheerfulness is health; melancholy, disease." Gloom and depression feed disease and hasten its development.

The Progress of Women.

The important places which women now occupy outside the home, which latter place some unprogressive people consider is their only sphere, is astonishing. They have attained distinction in nearly every profession and in other occupations not calling for severe manual labor. In this they are happier than their sisters are whose fate casts them among semi-barbarous races where they are obliged to perform hard physical labor that men do in civilized countries.

Our women in this day have attained their rights almost as far as their physical attributes allow, and they are admitted to any pursuit or calling to which they are adapted by nature. Nothing like this condition of affairs prevailed five or six decades ago, when they were not known professionally in theology, medicine or law. Now we have, according to comparatively recent statistics, between three and four thousand ministers belonging to what used to be called the weaker sex, seven or eight thousand women physicians and surgeons, and over a thousand Portias who have taken up the practice of the law for a living.

In the late forties Mrs. Blackwell a graduate of the theological school of Oberlin College, was denied for six years the opportunity to preach in a Congregational pulpit. She was in the advanced guard of the army of women who are now acquiring the higher education which will fit them to be intellectual workers along various lines of endeavor. It was thought a half century or so ago that if women were allowed to be school teachers that was as far as they could reasonably expect to go along the line of work in which men were almost exclusively employed.

The girls seem more anxious than the boys to obtain an education, for as a rule the latter leave school earlier than the former. There are more girls in the public schools than there are boys. In these institutions in New York City fifty-eight per cent, we are told, are girls, and in Chicago the female pupils far outnumber the restless masculine scholars, whose minds are more on sports than study. The Philadelphia schools show even a larger difference in favor of the girls.

The fact that ninety-three per cent. of the public school teachers in this country are women may have something to do with the ambition of girls in attending school and preparing themselves for a career of usefulness. Meanwhile the home will not die out for the domestic spirit is still uppermost in women as the large attendance at the cooking schools fully demonstrates.—Portland Express.

"Forget It."

There is a wide and deep philosophy contained in the phraseology of the street:

"Forget it!"

It is as important to forget as to remember. One is as difficult as the other. And ability along the one line is as hard to acquire as the other. Both must be cultivated.

It is impossible to become an optimist without learning how to forget. Disagreeable things are bound to happen and one must train one's self to wipe them off the mind as a boy wipes the figures from his slate. Having erased the ugly memories, it is easier to write the pleasant things on the slate of memory.

The Indian, for instance, never forgets a slight or injury. He will wait a lifetime to get even.

Don't be an Indian.

Life is too short to be an Indian.

The man who considers himself a Nemesis who treasures up a wrong, who nurses an injury, who lets ignoble hatreds fester in his heart, can not be a happy man. His soul is like a crouched tiger ready to spring upon the victim of his wrath.

Learn how to forget.

If it is easier to put on record in your memory personal grievances and to hug up an ugly feeling it is because you have chosen to do so. If you hoard up in your mind the unhappy episodes of life it is because you have formed the habit of doing so.

To persist in that habit of mind will make you miserable and a confirmed grouch. There is nothing noble in such a disposition to remember.

Learn to forget!

Let go the uninspiring, the depressing and weakening grievance. Hold onto the memories that cheer and brighten. There is not room for both. Wipe out the resentments. Write in the place of your hatreds the things that are pure and just and lovely and of good report.

Has someone treated you illy or put a slight upon you?

Forget it!

Do not let it spoil your happiness. It is a trifle light as air. Scorn to be scorned by one whom I scorn. Is that a matter to make me fret? Is that a matter to cause regret? Let no mean thing ruffle the serenity of your soul.

Forget it!—Memphis News Simitar.

Triumphs of Modern Surgery.

Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back, or they may be removed entirely; bones are spliced; pipes take the place of diseased sections of veins; antiseptic dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which such injuries entail.

Women Obtain Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Help.

She Has Guided Thousands to Health.—Now Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Mrs. Fred Seydel.

It is a great satisfaction for a woman to feel that she can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only, a woman full of sympathy for her sick sisters, and above all, a woman who has had more experience in treating female ills than any living person.

Over one hundred thousand cases of female diseases come before Mrs. Pinkham every year, some personally, others by mail, and this has been going on for twenty years, day after day. Surely women are wise in seeking advice from a woman of such experience, especially when it is absolutely free.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence of women, and every testimonial letter published is done so with the written consent or request of the writer, in order that other sick women may be benefited as they have been.

Mrs. Fred Seydel, of 412 North 54th Street, West Philadelphia, Pa., writes: Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Over a year ago I wrote you a letter asking advice, as I had female ills and could not carry a child to maturity. I received your kind letter of instructions and followed your advice. I am not only a well woman in consequence, but have a beautiful baby girl. I wish every suffering woman in the land would write you for advice, as you have done so much for me."

Just as surely as Mrs. Seydel was cured, will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure every woman suffering from any form of female ills.

No other medicine in all the world has such a record of cures of female troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Therefore no prudent woman will accept any substitute which a druggist may offer.

If you are sick, write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free and always helpful.

"Drinking Like a Fish." It was at a temperance meeting, and Jones, who vowed he could not make a speech to save his life, was told he really must say a few words, and that, being a stranger to the place, his remarks would have some of the force of novelty and be listened to attentively. Thus urged, he at last made a virtue of necessity—and made the speech of the evening.

"Ladies and Gentlemen—I cannot address you like the gentleman who has just sat down. Nature does not give us all the power of expressing our thoughts and experiences in flowing language, but I can give you a piece of good advice in plain words.

"I recommend each one here to do as I have done all my life, thanks to the example of a sensible father, and I can do no better than repeat to you the four words in which he summed up the wise advice he gave me.

"My friends, I say to every one of you here present, if you wish to be happy, 'Drink like a fish.' I have done so and—" but here the speaker was interrupted by the rather violent behavior of the chairman, who seized him by the coat-tails and ejaculated:

"Sir, sir, I must protest—" while at the same time murmurs, accompanied by laughter, came from the audience, and those in the front row regarded the orator with looks of blank amazement.

It was some minutes before Jones could make himself heard again, and then he remarked:

"I always thought that fish drank water; but, of course, if I am wrong, I am quite prepared to—" and then, led by the chairman and the front row of temperance advocates, a round of applause rang out such as never greeted any speaker in that room before.

Didn't Dare. "Why don't you try to demonstrate to your constituents that you are capable of an unselfish action?"

"My dear sir," answered Senator Sorghum, "if these people who have known me for years were to find me doing something in which I had no apparent interest they'd get suspicious and decide that I was engaged in a deep and diabolical plot."—Washington Star.

The Floor of the Pacific Ocean. If the waters of the Pacific could be drained, there would be revealed a vast stretch of territory comprising enormous plateaus, great valleys for which no parallels exist on the land surface—lofty mountains, beside which the Himalaya and the Andes would look like hillocks, and tremendous hollows or basins, only to be compared with those on the face of the moon.

While there are great mountains, and huge basins or "deeps," the plateau areas are by far the most extensive. Relatively speaking, the floor of the Pacific as now at last revealed on the plateau areas, is level. There are undulations and depressions, but the general area is about the same depth below the surface.

Soundings develop a mean depth of from 2,500 to 2,700 fathoms. In shoaler spots there is a mean depth of from 2,300 to 2,400 fathoms. Deeper spots show from 2,800 to 2,900 fathoms.—Leslie's Monthly.

ROADS AND ROAD MAKING.

HOW TO BUILD MACADAM ROADS.

Careful Selection Necessary if the Best Results Are Expected.

No one rock can be said to be a universally excellent road material. The climatic conditions vary so much in different localities, and the volume and character of traffic vary so much on different roads, that the properties necessary to meet all the requirements can be found in no one rock. If the best macadam road be desired, that material should be selected which best meets the conditions of the particular road for which it is intended.

The movement for better country roads which has received such an impetus from the bicycle organizations is still felt, and is gaining force from the rapid introduction of horseless vehicles. To this demand, which comes in a large measure from the urban population, is to be added that of the farmer, who is wakening to the fact that good roads greatly increase the profits from his farm produce, and thus materially better his condition; and to the farmer, indeed, we must look for any real improvement in our country roads.

In considering the comparative values of different rocks for road building, it must be taken for granted in all cases that the road is properly laid out, constructed, and maintained.

In most cases the selection of material for road making is determined more by its cheapness and convenience of location than by any properties it may possess. But when we consider the number of roads all over our country which are bad from neglect and from obsolete methods of maintenance that would be much improved by the use of any rock, too much care can not be used in selecting the proper material when good roads are desired at the lowest cost. When macadam roads are first introduced into a district they are at worst so far superior to the old earth roads that the question is rarely asked, whether, if another material had been used, better roads would not have been obtained, and this at a smaller cost. When mistakes are made they are not generally discovered until much time and money have been expended on inferior roads. Such errors can in a great measure be avoided if reasonable care is taken in the selection of a suitable material.

If a road is bad, the exact trouble must first be ascertained before the proper remedy can be applied. If the surface of a macadam road continues to be too muddy or dusty after the necessary drainage precautions have been followed, then the rock of which it is constructed lacks sufficient hardness or toughness to meet the traffic to which it is subjected. If, on the contrary, the fine binding material of the surface is carried off by wind and rain and is not replaced by the wear of the coarser fragments, the surface stones will soon loosen and allow water to make its way freely to the foundation and bring about the destruction of the road. Such conditions are brought about by an excess of hardness or toughness of the rock for the traffic. Under all conditions a rock of high cementing value is desirable; for, other things being equal, such a rock better resists the wear of traffic and the action of wind and rain.

In road building the attempt should be made to get a perfectly smooth surface, not too hard, too slippery, or too noisy, and as free as possible from mud and dust.

In selecting a road material it is well to consider the agencies of destruction to roads that have to be met. Among the most important are the wearing action of wheels and horses' feet, frost, rain, and wind. To find materials that can best withstand these agencies under all conditions is the great problem that confronts the road builder.

By using wide tires on heavy wagons the cost of keeping roads in repair would be greatly reduced.

There are many such properties that affect road building, but only three need be mentioned here. They are hardness, toughness, and cementing or binding power.

There are some rocks, such as limestones, that are hygroscopic, or possess the power of absorbing moisture from the air, and in dry climates such rocks are distinctly valuable, as the cementation of rock dust is in a large measure dependent for its full development on the presence of water.

THE HOME.
"Not now, but in the coming years, it may be in the better land, we'll read the meaning of our tears, And there, sometime, we'll understand. We'll catch the broken threads again, And finish where we here began, Heaven will the mysteries explain, And then, ah, then, we'll understand. God knows the way, He holds the key, He guides us with unerring hand; Sometime with tearless eyes we'll see, Yes, there, upthere, we'll understand."

Sorrow is not an incident occurring now and then. It is the woof which is woven into the warp of life, and he who has not discerned the divine sacredness of sorrow and the profound meaning which is concealed in pain has yet to learn what life is.—F. W. Robertson.

There's no music in a "rest" but there's the making of music in it. And people are always missing that part of life melody, always talking of perseverance and courage and fortitude, but patience is the finest and worthiest part of fortitude, and the rarest, too.—Ruskin.

Cultivate the best side of your neighbor and don't forget that he thinks you need as much charity from him as he needs from you. A man to a large extent makes his neighbors, for take men as they run, if treated kindly, generously, justly, they will nearly always make good neighbors. There are exceptions, however, and this sort it is best to let entirely alone.

A cheerful disposition is not only a power it is also a great health tonic. A depressed mind makes the system more susceptible to disease; encourages its development because it kills the power of resistance. A cheerful soul can resist disease, and it is well-known among physicians that there is a greater chance for recovery from exhaustive diseases of a bright, sunny soul, than of a gloomy despondent one. "Cheerfulness is health; melancholy, disease." Gloom and depression feed disease and hasten its development.

The Progress of Women.
The important places which women now occupy outside the home, which latter place some unprogressive people consider is their only sphere, is astonishing. They have attained distinction in nearly every profession and in other occupations not calling for severe manual labor. In this they are happier than their sisters are whose fate casts them among semi-barbarous races where they are obliged to perform hard physical labor that men do in civilized countries.

Our women in this day have attained their rights almost as far as their physical attributes allow, and they are admitted to any pursuit or calling to which they are adapted by nature. Nothing like this condition of affairs prevailed five or six decades ago, when they were not known professionally in theology, medicine or law. Now we have, according to comparatively recent statistics, between three and four thousand ministers belonging to what used to be called the weaker sex, seven or eight thousand women physicians and surgeons, and over a thousand Portias who have taken up the practice of the law for a living.

In the late forties Mrs. Blackwell a graduate of the theological school of Oberlin College, was denied for six years the opportunity to preach in a Congregational pulpit. She was in the advanced guard of the army of women who are now acquiring the higher education which will fit them to be intellectual workers along various lines of endeavor. It was thought a half century or so ago that if women were allowed to be school teachers that was as far as they could reasonably expect to go along the line of work in which men were almost exclusively employed.

The girls seem more anxious than the boys to obtain an education, for as a rule the latter leave school earlier than the former. There are more girls in the public schools than there are boys. In these institutions

DOCTOR'S JIM'S TEST.

"Father Tom" and "Doctor Jim" they were called by the villagers. They were brothers, Thomas and James Radcliffe, respectively, old bachelors both, one the village parson, who looked after the souls of the brethren, while the other, Brother Jim, doctored their bodies.

Father Tom lived in the little parsonage next the church, with the oldest woman inhabitant of the place—a dame past seventy, but who knew how to darn stockings—as his housekeeper. Dr. Jim lived at the other end of the village street and looked after his own housework. "Even brothers who are so fond of each other as Tom and I ought to live apart," said Dr. Jim. "It strengthens the affections."

The brothers passed every evening of their lives together, one night at the parsonage and the next at the "doctory," and they passed every one over their pipes, for the parson wasn't a prig and the doctor was wont to say that tobacco was the only known specific for all human ills.

"Tom," said his brother one evening, "I see that old Bill Lamson has died over at Leeds."

"Yes, Jim," said Father Tom, "and I was at his deathbed."

"I always suspected, Tom, that you knew all about Bill Lamson's part in the Johnson killing years ago, if he had a part in it, which I am inclined to believe by the way, and that you kept the whole thing to yourself."

"Well, suppose I did know about it, Jim. If Lamson told me anything—which I won't grant even now—he told it to me because I was a clergyman, and it's not in the clerical province to tell on a man who is repentant, no matter what his crime."

"Right you are, Tom, and I tell you that a physician ought to hold secrets just as tight if they come from a patient. I wouldn't give up a wounded murderer if he had come to me for treatment and had thrown himself on my mercy and on my professional care. I'd consider myself a sort of a father confessor to his bodily ills, as you might to the sins of his soul."

"You're all wrong, Jim. You can't class the physician with the priest. The soul and the body are things apart and the touch of the sacred doesn't enter into your profession as it does into mine. You have no right to claim the clergyman's exemption from giving evidence against an evildoer who has trusted in you. In concealment you do the state an injury."

"Likely I would if such a condition ever confronted me, Tom, but I wouldn't give the fellow up if he had once trusted me and I had cared for him. I might be an enemy of the state in so doing, but I'd sleep better after it."

The brothers separated for the night. Dr. Jim went into the little laboratory back of the sitting room, musing over the talk with his brother. "It would be a curious situation to be placed in," he thought, "to have a wounded criminal on your hands and to feel that the state might look to you as an accomplice because you had failed to turn him over to justice after you had patched him up."

Dr. Jim sat up late studying. He heard a noise outside the door at an hour after midnight, and, throwing it open, a man fell into the room and on to the floor. "I seen your sign, doctor," with the light behind it. I guess I'm done for, but maybe you can fix me up."

The man gasped and faintly. Sturdy Dr. Jim picked him up and carried him to the laboratory, where he laid his burden on the lounge and made a hasty examination. The man had a bullet hole through the thigh, and was weak from the loss of blood. Beyond that his injury wasn't serious. Dr. Jim stanchied the flow and gave the man restoratives.

"Where did you get this wound?" he asked his midnight visitor when he had regained consciousness.

"Don't you tell on me, Doc. I trusted you. I cracked a place with a pal. He got away all right and has the swag, but I got shot when the old feller in the house waked up. Maybe I done for him. I don't know, though, but he didn't shoot again after he hit me, and I let drive back."

"You can't stay here," said Dr. Jim. "Patients and other people will be here to-morrow, and you can't travel for a week. I'll put you on a cot in a room over the summer kitchen at the back of the yard, and I'll look after you, though it goes against the grain."

And the doctor smiled a bit grimly as he thought of his conversation with Father Tom a few hours before.

An hour later the wounded burglar was bandaged, fed and secreted in the upper chamber of the unused summer kitchen. There was a fierce pounding at Dr. Jim's front door. He opened it. The village constable and a dozen excited citizens were there. "Father Tom has been shot," they fairly howled at the physician.

Dr. Jim felt his knees tremble under him. The constable, who had some sense, hastened to say: "Oh, he ain't hurt bad, but come along."

The doctor found his brother suffering from a slight scalp wound and lamenting the loss of $500, nearly all the money he had in the world.

"No, honest, Doc, I ain't. Sam got the hull of it."

"A man should not do for his brother what he would not do for mankind at large," mused the doctor. He went to his study, took $500 in bills from a recess in his desk, put it in a huge envelope with a slip of paper, on which he wrote in a disguised hand: "Here's yer money. I didn't know you was a preacher. My father was one—Snaky Sam."

The doctor saw to it that his brother got the money the next day. The patient over the summer kitchen improved rapidly. Day by day he would repeat: "So the parson is your brother. You're a good, game one, Doc."

In a week the burglar was gone. Three days later Dr. Jim received a package. It contained $300 and a letter which said: "I met Sam. I got the money back, and then I raised some more; no matter how. The extra hundred is for professional services. You're a good, game one, Doc. 'Lanky Ben.'"

The next night Father Tom and Dr. Jim were sitting together smoking. "Jim," said Father Tom, "if I'd hit that burglar I shot at and he'd come here, what would you have done with him?"

"Tom, my boy, the time has come to talk of other things."—Edward B. Clark, in Chicago Record-Herald.

A STATESMAN'S HOBBY.

Joseph Chamberlain's Passion for His Garden.

"A man of many parts" is a popular description of the colonial secretary.

Politically this may be true, but in a general sense it would be more correct to say that he divides his time and attention between two things—the affairs of state and the gardens and conservatories of Highbury. For the past ten years it can fairly truthfully be said of him that when not in "the House" he has been in the garden.

There is no doubt that when not engaged with the worries of the empire Mr. Chamberlain thinks of little else but his orchids and his gardens, and for some years he has been engaged upon the none too easy task of making the later as famous as his orchids. Scarcely a day passes during the recesses but the colonial secretary spends many hours in his gardens altering and making additions.

During the present recess he has commenced a very important addition, and it is characteristic of Mr. Chamberlain's wonderful capacity for work and fertility of ideas that in the laying-out of his gardens he never copies any one's idea, but thinks out a new design, and then, carrying the scheme in his mind, he has the work carried out under his eye in a systematic manner.

The new garden will be near the lodge and at the extreme end of the existing ornamental gardens. Passing through the rock Alpine and Italian gardens, one is struck by the wealth of bloom, which gives them a bright and gay appearance even in this dull season, and visitors to Highbury will also notice an interesting addition quite apart from the more pretentious scheme.

This is a Dutch garden, which is situated to the right of the representation of the beauties of sunny Italy. This is surrounded by a hedge of holly, and is in three divisions—one section being devoted to narcissi, all choice varieties, a second to tulips, and the third to all the best and choicest species of iris.

For the purposes of the new garden a piece of ground one acre to an acre and a half in extent has been taken in from the park. The first introduction was a patch of bamboo, comprising something like twenty varieties, and as one or two of the beds at one end have been planted, it is possible even now to get some idea of how beautiful will be the picture when completed.—London Express.

Facial Resemblance.

"Physiologists tell us," observed a well-known lawyer the other day, "that no two faces are exactly alike and I think they are correct, although we often hear of one person being the exact image of another. That this is largely a matter of imagination can be proved by investigation. For example, I have in my office a clerk who is constantly mistaken for myself; several people say he resembles me so closely that I must be joking when I deny the relationship. In order to ascertain how much reason there was for these statements I took the fellow to a photographer's one day last week and we both had our pictures taken together, and I would defy any one to point out a single point or resemblance."

"My clerk, however, regards the matter as a good joke and I half suspected he acknowledged relationship in a good many cases intentionally, so as to cause complications. I have shown the photograph to several people who have made the mistake, but it has no influence upon them whatever, and it is impossible to convince them against their will."

How He Wood Sleep.

A story going the rounds of the police force was told by the wife of the patrolman whom it concerns and consequently bears the stamp of truth.

The policeman in question is on night duty and one morning last week he went home after work to take his full eight hours sleep. For two hours he tossed about and could not more than get his eyes shut. Finally, in desperation he rose, donned his uniform and sitting in a chair tilted against the wall, fell sound asleep.

"And I could hardly get him awake for supper," explained his wife.—Kansas City Journal.
